Baye McNeil

Baye McNeil was born in Brooklyn, NY, USA and immigrated to Japan in 2004. His interest in writing and literature developed at an early age. He graduated from Long Island University in Brooklyn NY with a bachelors degree in Media Arts and English. He is the author of two memoirs on life for a black American in Japan, “Hi! My Name is Loco and I am a Racist” and “Loco in Yokohama” both critically acclaimed, the former voted to the top 10 list of books by black authors of 2012. He is a noted blogger and newspaper columnist. His column, “Black Eye”, appears monthly in The Japan Times newspaper. In it he discusses issues related to the experience of black people living in Japan.
